News from the Refugee Council

Refugee Week is almost upon us! The week kicks off on Saturday 18th with a football tournament and fun day in Leeds. On Sunday 19th June we will hold our ever popular Umbrella Parade starting at 1.30pm in Victoria Embankment Gardens and ending at Celebrating Sanctuary on the Southbank. At Celebrating Sanctuary, you can borrow a human 'book' and hear a story of an asylum seeker or refugee as we will be holding our second Human Library event. On the 21st June we will be showing a film that is collaboration between the Refugee Council and the British Council, on importance of learning English to be able to build a life in the UK. On the 22nd of June the Refugee Council young cricket team will play their annual cricket match against the Free Forresters and on the 25th June we have a fundraising Ceilidh and another football tournament to close the week!

New Resource: Handbook on preventing unnecessary immigration detention

A new resource has been launched by the International Detention Coalition – 'There are Alternatives: A handbook on preventing unnecessary immigration detention'. The handbook is based on two years of research in partnership with La Trobe University, Australia and found humane and cost effective mechanisms that prevent unnecessary and damaging immigration detention.

Migration Oxford Website

From the website:

<http://www.migration.ox.ac.uk/about.shtml>

The MigrationOxford initiative has been developed to signpost, highlight and bring together the numerous academics conducting research and teaching on migration within the University of Oxford.

Oxford is a world-leader in terms of innovative research into the causes and effects of all kinds of migration, forced and voluntary. In the last decade the study, scale and regulation of national and international migration has become increasingly significant. Migration, both of those seeking refuge and those seeking a new and better way of life, has become a central social, economic and political issue and one that is regularly discussed in public, political and media debate. Oxford researchers are committed to entering these debates through the production of high-quality research, the teaching of graduate programmes for masters and doctoral students and the dissemination of findings to policy and practitioner audiences.

MigrationOxford is an initiative led by the three major collaborating centres in the Social Sciences Division of the University of Oxford: COMPAS, IMI and RSC.

Refugees into Teaching (RiT) Website

Refugees into Teaching (RiT) has recently upgraded its website content, style and accessibility, to increase its performance as the central repository for, and about, refugee teachers on the web.

Home: The Child Recovery and Reintegration Network

A dedicated online resource for the recovery and reintegration of children affected by sexual exploitation and trafficking globally.

Developed and maintained through an Oak Foundation fellowship, the site is supported by an Advisory Group of experts and hosted by the UHI Centre for Rural Childhood in Scotland.

The online resource provides summaries of the key stages in the recovery and reintegration phase and directs readers to relevant texts. Home: The Child Recovery and Reintegration Network also has dedicated spaces for both researchers and practitioners to access tools and resources and post comments.

Please visit Home: The Child Recovery and Reintegration Network for more information and to contribute to the site www.childrecovery.info

New Resource: IDC e-list - Preventing & Reducing Detention

The International Detention Coalition (IDC) has started an e-list for those interested in sharing information on mechanisms to prevent and reduce immigration detention, including alternatives to detention. Individuals are encouraged to share research, national developments, events or questions to the group.

To join the e-list visit:

New website devoted to recognising the role of migrants in the history of the NHS

A new website has been launched to highlight the role that migrants have played in the history of the National Health Service. The site was developed by researchers based at The Open University, The University of Manchester and London Metropolitan University. It aims to act as a resource for anyone interested in what has long been a neglected aspect of the history of the NHS by describing recent and ongoing work on the subject and encouraging further research on the contribution migrants have made to British healthcare. The team behind the website welcome contributions from anyone interested in sharing information and publicising their work.

Migration issues – Other Agencies Intercultural dialogue

<http://www.cohesioninstitute.org.uk/Resources/Toolkits/InterculturalDialogue>

(Source: EoE AS&R/MW Newsflash 14-18 Feb 2011)

The British Council and the Institute of Community Cohesion have just launched this web resource which looks at: “the theoretical underpinnings of intercultural dialogue and how this relates to the policy framework for tackling difference in the UK and internationally. The guide also offers planning and measuring tools in order to assess the impact ICD has had on individuals, the local community and society as a whole.

There is a comprehensive bank of national and international case studies illustrating approaches to ICD through themes such as arts, sports and faith.

For the first time this online resource guide also looks at what factors contribute to intercultural dialogue and the challenges and opportunities this agenda presents for those working in the British Council and others in dealing with the most challenging contemporary issues of our day.”

CMRB Call for Papers

Conference - April 2012

LONDON - CITY OF PARADOX

Call for papers

Dear Colleague,

In 2012 the world's media will focus on London as host city of the Olympic Games, providing an opportunity for the British government and other interest groups to celebrate the city as an economic hub and as a centre of global cultural activity.

We wish to address these issues and to explore other perspectives on the city and its histories, its cultural heritage and its contradictory role within global networks. Please join us at an international conference – London, City of Paradox – to take place at the University of East London from 3 - 5 April 2012.

The conference will provide a forum for discussion among academics, community activists, artists and others, encouraging the development of informed, critical perspectives on London past and present. Please see the Call for Papers attached: please circulate to all who may be interested.

Best wishes,

Mary Sutton

Conference – April 2012

London – City of Paradox CALL FOR PAPERS

In 2012 London will be a focus of public interest worldwide. The Olympic Games will bring intense media coverage, viewed by the British government and by numerous interest groups as an opportunity to celebrate the city as an economic hub and a centre of global cultural activity.

We wish to address these issues in the context of independent assessments - of the city, its histories, its cultural heritage, and its complex and contradictory role within contemporary global networks. From 3 to 5 April 2012 the University of East London will host an international conference: London - City of Paradox.

This event considers the city in its local, national and transnational contexts. It aims to stimulate discussion among academics, community activists, artists and others, encouraging development of informed, critical perspectives on London. It recognises that London is viewed and experienced in a host of ways: by its residents past and present; by those influenced by national, colonial and imperial authorities centred in the city; and by those who have embraced, contested and resisted the latter.

This will be a multi-disciplinary event, drawing on insights from History, Geography, Sociology, Anthropology, Cultural Studies, Film Studies, Migration Studies, Refugee Studies and Urban Studies. It will engage those involved in visual art, performance, creative writing and in community action.

Keynote speakers include:

Craig Calhoun (New York University)
Paul Gilroy (London School of Economics)
Ranabir Samaddar (Calcutta Research Group)
Saskia Sassen (Columbia University)
Jerry White (Birkbeck, University of London)

Themes: you are invited to contribute a paper to one of six thematic streams:

1. Contending histories: London as an object of historical study; London in the national narrative; “people’s histories”; London, gender and history; history and community today; “official” history and the Olympic project.

2. London and the world: colonialism, neo-colonialism and the metropolitan city; commerce, slavery and empire; London and the neo-liberal networks; global city: London and the cities of the South.

3. Race, racism and the city: “hidden” and “invisible” populations; inclusion and exclusion; geographies of community; immigration, work and settlement; refuge and asylum; citizenship, multiculturalism, “cohesion” and integration today.

4. East London: the East End in narratives of London and nation; East London and the maritime networks; the East End as refuge; East End, gender and sexuality; resistance and radicalism; regeneration and the “new” East End.

5. Imaging and Performing London: visual cultures yesterday and today – film, photography, multimedia, performance.

6. City and spectacle: London and the Olympic cities – global spectacle and local reality. Documenting the Olympics past and present.

Please send an abstract of 250-300 words by 1 October 2011 to Mary Sutton:

M.J.Sutton@uel.ac.uk

(All enquiries about the conference also to Mary Sutton.)

London – City of Paradox is organised together with the Runnymede Trust, London East Research Institute, Raphael Samuel History Centre, Matrix East Research Lab, the Centre for Narrative Research and the Centre for Cultural Studies Research.

Review of Archive Online Resources

Over the past several weeks, I have had the chance to do some house-keeping with the Archive's online resources. This has given me the chance to do a significant overhaul to both our Refugee Archives Blog and our Netvibes page.

Refugee Archives Blog

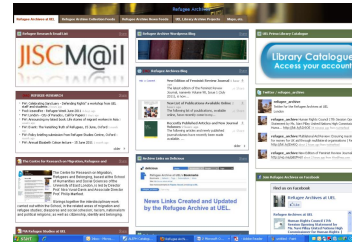

Link : <http://refugeearchives.wordpress.com/>

I have updated the blog with a new design and layout which I hope will make the blog cleaner to look and easier to navigate and use. I have also taking the opportunity to add several new pages, including new pages giving updated links to 'Conferences and Events' and 'News Stories.' I have also updated the various RSS feeds that appear in the sidebars. These RSS feeds are taken from the various links that I post to my Delicious account

(http://www.delicious.com/refugee_archives) and include both regularly updated national and international news stories as well as details of new and arriving publications for the Refugee Archive and UEL Docklands Library. I hope this is useful and if there is anything I have missed that you think needs including on this blog then do please let me know!

Netvibes Site

Link : <http://www.netvibes.com/refugee-archives#Refugee Archives at UEL>

I have also given a late Spring clean to the Refugee Archives Netvibes site detailed above. I have taken the chance to hopefully improve the design and layout of the site whilst also refreshing some of the content. The role of the site is to essentially act as a central access point for pulling together a number of RSS feeds, form a number of sources, to provide a central hub of continuously updating news stories and other information relating to refugee and forced migration studies. I hope you will find it useful!

Subscribe to our Email List

We have created a Refugee-Research Jiscmail List in the hope that it will provide a forum for lively debate and discussion around the key contemporary issues and research relating to refugee studies and forced migration. We are keen to engage and encourage both staff and students here at UEL who are researching and studying these issues and we would also like to invite any individuals, groups or potential partners (academic and non-academic) who are interested in debating these issues to join us and to participate.

To subscribe to the mail group www.jiscmail.ac.uk, type REFUGEE-RESEARCH into the 'find lists' box, or use the alphabetical index to scroll down to R. and then follow the instructions on our REFUGEE-RESEARCH homepage to 'join or leave the list'. Most users need only enter their email address and name. Alternatively, email the Archivist, Paul Dudman on p.v.dudman@uel.ac.uk, requesting to join the mail group.
